A number of pipes were frozen on both these mornings.

No Change in Tulsa Banks.

The dispatch from Tulsa stating that J. W. Orr had sold the control of his bank at Tulsa, Keifer and Preston, is entirely erroneous. As published sometime ago, Mr. Orr sold his interest in the International Bank & Trust company, of this city, the Bank of Big Cabin and Bank of Adair, to Morris Knight and R. E. Thompson, but there has been no change in the Colonial Trust company, at Tulsa, the Oklahoma State Bank, at Preston, or the Bank of Keifer, except that Mr. Knight sold his interests in these institutions to Mr. Orr. The Tulsa correspondent who sent out this report was entirely misinformed.

The Date You Write Today is 12-12-12.

You may date your letter 12-12-12 today. It's the last time that combination of figures can be used for a century, until it comes around to December 12, 2012, and you will probably not be here to write it then. And it's the last time that you will be able to use any like combination of the three figures for ninety-eight years. On October 10, 1910, you could write the date 10-10-10, and on November 11, 1911, you could write it 11-11-11. Previously the necessary cipher before the figure spoiled the combination. None of these three combinations will return before 2010.
